

DOMINION OF GLASS

Recovered Archive — Primary Document

OVERVIEW

The Dominion of Glass refers to a system of observation, containment, and identity control. It is not a physical location, but a constructed environment designed to reflect, monitor, and fragment those within it.

Transparency is the primary instrument of authority. Subjects are encouraged to self-regulate under the assumption of constant visibility.

KNOWN STRUCTURES

The Shattered Room — Initial containment site. Structural fractures reported.

The Echo Hall — Signal amplification corridor. Echo distortion present.

The Low Glass — Transitional zone. Containment weakened. Escape probability elevated.

SYSTEM FAILURE

Convergence events resulted in cascading containment failures. Authority fragments were unable to reassert full control.

Post-event analysis indicates the system was never designed to withstand mutual recognition between contained entities.

FINAL NOTE

This archive is incomplete. Several documents appear redacted or removed. Residual structures may persist beyond the primary breach.

Visibility does not imply safety.
